Labour Codes: Story So Far

In this section, we help you in understanding the developments that have taken thus far on the implementation of the 4 labour codes on wages, social security, industrial relations, and occupational safety, health, and working conditions, which received the Presidential assent between the years 2019 and 2020.

The Government of India has, through a series of notifications dated 21 November 2025, brought into effect the 4 labour codes. We have covered this aspect in detail in our ERGO.

The codes consolidate and consequently replace 29 Central labour laws and bring about a more cohesive and modern framework for compliance. The consolidation exercise in the form of the labour codes does bring with it certain changes in the earlier labour law regime. The digitization of procedures (relating to registration and intimations) and the concept of deemed registration (in case authorities do not register the establishment within the specified timeline) are seen as a positive impact on the ease of commencing business as well as the ease of doing business. Similarly, the substitution of prosecution-oriented framework with facilitation process, whereby an employer would be given an opportunity to rectify any non-compliance, heralds an important change in the approach of the government.

While the Central Government has recently re-notified the draft Central rules under the 4 labour codes, in the absence of finalization and enforcement of Central / state rules, schemes, and notifications, the transition is still in the process of unfolding. Set out below are the updates that we have seen on the labour codes front, recently:

- 1. Issuance of FAQs: The Central Government has recently released the FAQs on labour codes, and we have covered this aspect in detail in our ERGO. Further, clarifications have been made by other authorities including the Employees' State Insurance Corporation (ESIC), through multiple circulars referring to the definition of 'wages' and emphasizing the requirement of the employers to register additional employees who may potentially be covered because of the revised definition of 'wages'.
- 2. Clarification on gratuity: The Institute of Chartered Accountants of India has released a set of FAQs addressing key accounting implications arising from the implementation of the new labour codes. These FAQs note that any increase in gratuity liability due to the new labour codes must be recognised as an expense in the profit and loss account for the interim financial statements/results for the period ending 31 December 2025, in line with the applicable accounting standards.

3. Issuance of rules: In the past year, several key industrialised states such as Haryana, Delhi, Maharashtra, Gujarat, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, Tamil Nadu, Bihar, and Karnataka released draft rules under some or all of the labour codes for public consultation. As of now, 2 out of a total of 36 states and union territories are yet to publish draft rules on the Code on Wages, 2019, Occupational Safety, Health and Working Conditions, 2020 (OSH Code), 3 have not released draft rules on Industrial Relations Code, 2020 (IR Code), and 1 has not released draft rules on Code on Social Security, 2020. Further, states such as Gujarat, Karnataka, Uttar Pradesh and Mizoram appear to have released final rules under some of the labour codes. In the month of December 2025, the governments of Punjab and Bihar have released the draft rules pursuant to the 4 labour codes.

Case Updates

In this section, we share important judicial decisions rendered in the past one month from an employment and labour law standpoint.

IC constituted at the aggrieved woman's workplace has the authority to address complaint against a respondent who is an employee of a different department under the POSH Act: Supreme Court

In the case of Dr Sohail Malik v Union of India and Another, Civil Appeal Number 404 of 2024, the Supreme Court of India, examined several procedural requirements under the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 (POSH Act).

In the present case, the appellant was accused of sexual harassment by the aggrieved woman and a complaint under the POSH Act was filed before the internal committee (IC) at the aggrieved woman's department. Pursuant to this, the appellant filed an application before the Central Administrative Tribunal (CAT) to set aside the proceedings in entirety. The CAT dismissed the application, which was later upheld by the respective High Court leading to the present appeal.

The court noted that there is no bar on the jurisdiction of IC constituted at the workplace of the aggrieved women to inquire into a complaint against a respondent who is an employee of a different workplace. Additionally, the court noted that while the IC at the aggrieved women's workplace may not have the authority to impose punishment on the respondent, its findings can be implemented by the employer of the respondent.

The court observed that, in a situation wherein the IC constituted at the aggrieved woman's workplace is conducting a preliminary inquiry under the POSH Act, the IC constituted at the workplace of the respondent will be the inquiring authority and may take a decision to initiate disciplinary proceedings.

Deposit of gratuity as a pre-condition to admit appeal under Section 7(7) of the Gratuity Act includes interest on gratuity as well: Kerala High Court

In the case of Managing Director, Kerala State Financial Enterprises Limited v Sri Mathew and Others, Writ Petition Number 11384 of 2025, the Kerala High Court assessed whether under Section 7(7) of the erstwhile Payment of Gratuity Act, 1972 (Gratuity Act), the deposit of gratuity amount as a pre-condition to admitting appeal includes deposit of gratuity amount alone or the gratuity amount along with the interest accrued.

The petitioner argued that the Gratuity Act does not mandate that the interest accrued on the amount due to the employee as gratuity is required to be paid as pre-deposit under Section 7(7) of the Gratuity Act. Further, for raising an appeal, the Gratuity Act mandates the appellant to either produce a certificate of the controlling authority confirming the deposit of amount of gratuity as required under Section 7(4) of the Gratuity Act or deposit such amount with the appellate authority.

The court noted that the amount determined under Section 7(4)(c) of the Gratuity Act includes the amount of gratuity along with the interest accrued. The Court further observed that the purpose of the pre-deposit under Section 7(7) of the Gratuity Act is to ensure that, once the appeal is decided, the amount payable to the employee can be paid without any delay and this amount takes in interest also.

Section 45A of the ESI Act can only be invoked, if either conditions of non-submission or maintenance of any records or the obstruction by the employer during the inspection are satisfied: Supreme Court

In the case of M/S Carborandum Universal Limited v Employees' State Insurance Corporation (ESIC), Civil Appeal Number 14858 of 2025, the Supreme Court observed that the power of the ESIC to determine the contributions payable by the employer as per Section 45A of the erstwhile Employees' State Insurance Act, 1948 (ESI Act) is not an alternative procedure, merely because the records are perceived to be inadequate; rather the requirements under the same must be fulfilled before it can be invoked.

In this case, the respondent had issued a show cause notice alleging that the appellant had neither paid contributions nor submitted returns for the period from August 1988 to March 1992, as per the provisions of the ESI Act. Consequently, the respondent passed an order under Section 45A of the ESI Act, determining the contributions payable with the applicable interest. Aggrieved by this decision, the appellant challenged it before the Employee Insurance Court and later before the Madras High Court, however, both courts dismissed the appellant's petitions.

The court, in this matter, observed that Section 45A of the ESI Act can be invoked, if either conditions of non-submission or maintenance of any records or the obstruction by the employer during the inspection are satisfied. However, in this case, these conditions were not met. Thus, the correct statutory procedure would be to examine the correctness of the records under Section 75 of the ESI Act, to initiate proceedings under the provision of Section 77 of ESI Act, subject to the stipulated limitation period.

Employment cases cannot be categorised as commercial disputes under the CC Act: Delhi High Court

In the case of ARM Digital Media Private Limited and Others v Ritesh Singh, Civil Suit Number 896 of 2024, the Delhi High Court, observed that employment cases are not commercial disputes under the Commercial Courts Act, 2015 (CC Act).

The plaintiff alleged that the defendant had breached various contractual and fiduciary obligations, arising out of the employment agreement (Agreement) executed between the plaintiff and the defendant. Subsequently, the defendant joined a competing entity, which the plaintiff argued, violated various significant obligations under the Agreement. Thereby, the plaintiff initiated the suit, and subsequently the defendant challenged the same, through this application.

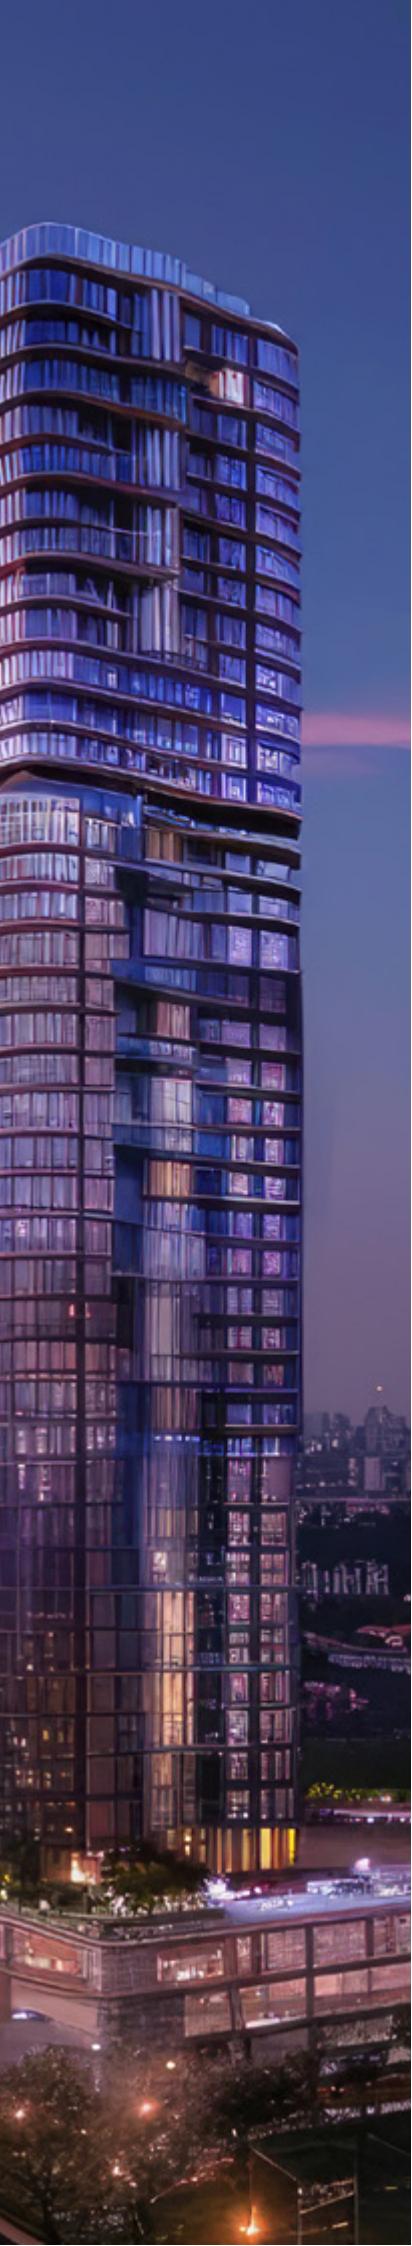

In the present case, the plaintiff argued that the employment disputes are not commercial disputes, however, the defendant on the other hand argued that due to employment agreement being inseparable from the share subscription-cum-shareholder's agreement, the dispute is commercial in nature and can be filed before the commercial court. The court concluded that employment arrangements are personal service obligations and cannot be characterised as commercial in nature. Additionally, the employment arrangements do not come within the purview of Section 2 (1)(c) of the CC Act which expounds on the definition of a commercial dispute. Thus, this application was dismissed.

Industry Insights

In this section, we delve into interesting human resources related practices and/or initiatives as well as industry trends across various sectors in the past one month.

AI - driven productivity brings in growing attrition rate

With the advent of artificial intelligence (AI) in the past few years within India Inc, it is noted that even though a growing number of employees are using AI tools, only limited employees are spending time, investing in such AI skills. Consequently, employees who actively build their AI skills achieve greater efficiency, making them more employable. However, this leads to higher attrition rate as the employees who are advanced AI learners seek employment with better technology, flexibility and career progression. Additionally, most of the employees at a global level largely use AI at work, for basic functions such as drafting emails or summarising documents. Only a limited number of employees qualify as advanced users, using different AI tools to perform complex tasks. Thus, there is a dual challenge due to the adoption of AI, wherein employers are concerned about jobs disappearing due to AI, and are worried about the reduced collaborative practices and the increased reliance on automated systems.
